The Pension Protection Act modified I.R.C. § 4958 to include investment advisors as disqualified persons of a sponsoring organization with donor advised funds. An investment advisor is defined for this purpose as any person compensated by the sponsoring organization for managing the investment of, or providing investment advice with respect to, assets maintained in donor advised funds or pools of assets all or a part of which are attributable to donor advised funds. The Cleveland Foundation is a sponsoring organization with donor advised funds, and it engages investment advisors for the investment management of pools of assets that may include donor advised fund assets.

The compensation reported by The Cleveland Foundation on Line 25c reflects compensation paid only for the investment management of assets held by donor advised funds.

Part IV-B, Line

The Cleveland Foundation does not administer or control partial benefit funds; however, it receives a percentage of the income from partial benefit funds for fixed periods of time, thereafter being granted the entire principal and income. The activities of these funds are reported on Form 1041 by the funds' respective trustees. In 2007, The Cleveland Foundation received approximately 95 percent of the aggregate income of these funds. Upon termination of each partial benefit fund, the then principal of the partial benefit fund will be contributed to The Cleveland Foundation and thereafter be included as an asset of The Cleveland Foundation on its Form 990.

The supporting organizations are controlled by The Cleveland Foundation but separate Form 990 returns are filed for each.

One of the Foundation's Directors and Distribution Committee members, Frederick Nance, is a civic leader in Greater Cleveland and a lawyer and general partner with the law firm, Squire Sanders & Dempsey L.L.P. In 2007, Squire, Sanders & Dempsey L.L.P. was one of the law firms engaged by The Cleveland Foundation. The Cleveland Foundation's first engagement of Squire, Sanders & Dempsey L.L.P. predates Mr. Nance joining the Foundation's Board and Distribution Committee.

Schedule A, Part III, Line 3a

The Cleveland Foundation maintains a number of scholarship funds. Each scholarship fund is governed by guidelines established by The Cleveland Foundation and adopted by its Board of Directors. The guidelines are designed to ensure that all scholarship grants are awarded on an objective and non-discriminatory basis. Under the Board-adopted scholarship guidelines, eligibility criteria for qualification of scholarship recipients and the awarding of the scholarships must include one or more of the following: financial need, academic performance or other indication of scholarship, leadership ability, volunteer service or civic commitment, motivation and potential. In some instances, recommendations from instructors or other educators are also required with applications. Scholarship applicants are evaluated against the eligibility and award qualifications by selection committees that are appointed by The Cleveland Foundation or otherwise comprised of identified educators or individuals with expertise relevant to the particular scholarship. In some instances, scholarship funds are made available by the Foundation to colleges, universities, high schools, or other academic institutions, and selection committees arranged by these institutions apply the eligibility and award criteria qualifying the award recipients for the scholarship awards.

ABOUT THE COVER Terrell Howard is a sixth-grader who took part in SMART in the City, a summer arts education program for Cleveland students, supported by the foundation and UBS Wealth Management. A budding poet, Terrell wrote this poem during his summer experience. The foundation is committed to fostering the talents of children like Terrell and creating opportunities for them to thrive and grow.

WHERE I'M FROM
BY TERRELL HOWARD

I'm from maple syrup and pancakes on Sunday mornings.
I'm from chewing on candy and hating cheese.
I'm from Two Beats hip-hop and Rand B making me laugh.
I'm from my brother telling me "You should know better" when I talk back to my Mom, and "Anytime" when I tell him "Thank you."
I'm from my grandparents being friends from the time they were kids.
I'm from looking like my Uncle James when I get my hair cut short.
I'm from wanting to be like my grandfather—the way he loved my dad like a best friend.
I'm from wishing I had a remote control so I could delete all the bad things I did.

THERE IS NO QUESTION THAT THE CHALLENGES FACING GREATER CLEVELAND ARE DEEP AND COMPLEX. NO ONE PERSON OR ORGANIZATION CAN CREATE LASTING CHANGE ALONE.

CHAMPION FOR CHANGE SINCE 1914

MISSION The mission of the Cleveland Foundation is to enhance the lives of all residents of Greater Cleveland, now and for generations to come, by building community endowment, addressing needs through grantmaking, and providing leadership on key community issues.

HISTORY Established in 1914, the Cleveland Foundation is the world's first community foundation, the vision of Cleveland banker and lawyer Frederick H. Goff. He wanted to pool the charitable resources of Cleveland's philanthropists into a single, great, and permanent endowment for the betterment of current and future residents. His revolutionary idea has grown into an organization that has benefited millions of lives over the past 94 years and forever reshaped the way community members come together to care for one another. Today, the Cleveland Foundation is the third-largest community foundation in America in terms of assets.

WHAT IS A COMMUNITY FOUNDATION? A community foundation is a charitable organization created by and for a community of people. It is supported by local donors and governed by a board of private citizens who work toward the greater good of the citizens in the community. Funds come from a variety of sources, including bequests and living trusts, and are invested in perpetuity. The earnings on investments are then distributed to worthy organizations or causes. Today, more than 1,000 community foundations exist around the world.

FOR 2007

- Assets at year-end: $2.2 billion
- Total return on endowment investments: 8.36%
- Grants authorized: 2,966
- Value of grants authorized: $85 million
- New gifts received: $59 million
- Operating expenses: $11.1 million
- Number of employees: 70 (as of June 1, 2008)

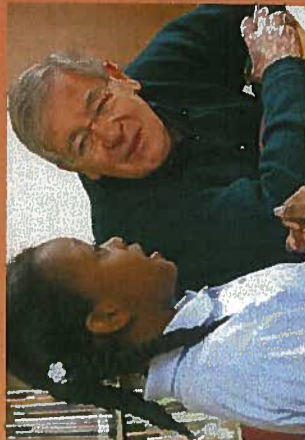

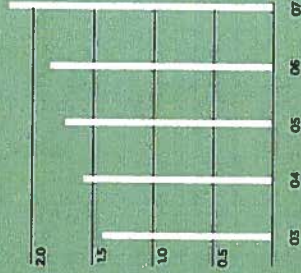

STEWARDSHIP We are stewards of donor dollars, ensuring that the wishes of our donors are met. Our diversified investment strategy is guided by our board and our investment advisors.

THE CLEVELAND FOUNDATION AT A GLANCE

GRANTMAKING The foundation awards most grants to 501(c)(3) nonprofit organizations that support projects and programs that benefit Greater Cleveland's citizens, meet community needs, and test new ideas. We annually award more than 2,800 grants, ranging from a few hundred dollars to several million dollars. Some two-thirds of our discretionary dollars are directed to areas identified as the community's greatest needs: economic transformation, including advanced energy and globalization; public education reform; human services, including early child and youth development; neighborhoods and housing; and arts advancement.

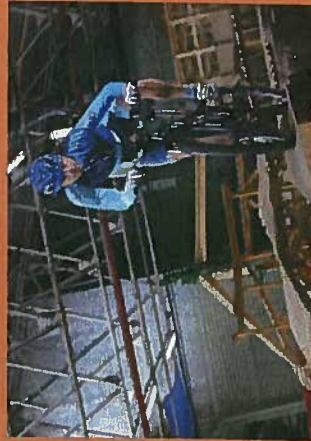

PARTNERSHIP AND LEADERSHIP The foundation leverages its resources and magnifies its impact on important causes in the community by working in partnership with many organizations. We focus our attention and efforts on vital issues and often serve as collaborator and convener as well as grantmaker.

PHILANTHROPY The Cleveland Foundation exists because of the extraordinary generosity and vision of our donors. We offer numerous creative and rewarding ways to donate to the community, some with significant tax advantages. Currently, the foundation consists of more than 800 separate funds representing individuals, families, organizations, and corporations. We are the center for charitable investment in the Greater Cleveland community.

The Intergenerational School has received an "excellent" rating on the Ohio State Report Card for four consecutive years. Founded in 2000, the school has classes of multi-age groups based on developmental needs. The foundation is partnering with the school to develop a comprehensive plan to ensure its long-term success.

Ray Petro made his dream of mountain biking year-round in Cleveland a reality by creating Ray's Mountain Bike Park. Petro came to the Civic Innovation Lab, an affiliate of the Cleveland Foundation, with a desire to maximize his business. Petro has worked with the Lab to create a plan to know his audience and market the park to raise ridership.

In an unprecedented collaboration, Dr. Delos "Toby" Cosgrove, CEO of the Cleveland Clinic (left), and Thomas Zenty, CEO of University Hospitals, joined together with the foundation and other neighborhood partners to boost not just their respective institutions but the entire neighborhood. Part of this collaboration is Greater Circle Living, a new employer-assisted housing program that provides forgivable loans to eligible employees of local nonprofit institutions.

Esperanza has been busy serving Cleveland's growing Hispanic community since 1983 with a variety of programs and social events designed to celebrate academic and social achievement. With foundation support, Esperanza's Stay in School for College and Career Opportunities (SISCO) program works with students to reduce the dropout rate through tutoring, enrichment, and motivation.

DEAR FRIENDS

When you think of the Cleveland Foundation, what comes to mind? Most people think of us in our role of giving away money to worthy causes. And grantmaking is a critical part of how we carry out our mission to enhance the lives of Greater Clevelanders.

But there is more.

We'd like to offer you another way to think of us: as the community's partner. Vital to our mission is our role of collaborator, facilitator, and convener. We work closely with a wide array of organizations – government agencies, nonprofit institutions, businesses, and others – on projects aimed at addressing areas of need or seizing upon opportunities in Greater Cleveland.

These partnerships have tremendous power. Indeed, we believe this type of collaboration is the only way to combat the city's biggest challenges and to bring about real change. It is the only way to achieve Cleveland's full potential.

We are proud of the partnerships we are involved with that are making a positive difference in Greater Cleveland.

- We are working with state government leaders and others to shape public policy and advocate for legislation that will positively affect Cleveland. For example, in association with many partners, we are working to build support for an enlightened education policy and strong advanced energy policies in Ohio.
- We seeded Case Western Reserve University's creation of the Great Lakes Institute for Energy Innovation. And we partnered with the Great Lakes Science Center and Cleveland Indians to install solar energy panels at their facilities, as part of a demonstration project to promote development of an advanced energy industry here. These efforts follow the successful installation of a wind turbine at the science center in 2006.
- We developed the international relationships that led Germany's IBC Solar, a dozen Costa Rican companies, and a Costa Rican trade office to locate operations in Cleveland.
- We are leading an unprecedented local coalition to realize the tremendous potential of Greater University Circle, extending beyond the city's cultural epicenter into its half-dozen surrounding urban neighborhoods. Extensive community revitalization and forgivable loans to new homeowners are making this area a highly desirable place to live.
- We collaborated with the Cleveland Metropolitan School District, the Cleveland Teachers' Union, and the George Gund Foundation on the creation of six new high-performing schools, with two science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) academies on the way.
- We are partnering with myriad community organizations to connect our children and youth to services they need to help them learn and thrive. We are convening city, county, and state organizations to help ex-prisoners who are re-entering the community become productive citizens. And we are working with neighborhood leaders to help end violence on our streets and to provide appropriate support for families in crisis.
- We continue to actively work in the economic development arena with business leaders and organizations, including the Greater Cleveland Partnership, Team NEO, and the Cleveland-Cuyahoga County Port Authority, to support efforts to attract companies and create jobs.
- We've established an effective network of resources, such as Project Access and Community Wealth Ventures, that teach business and income-generating skills to faith, arts, and other small nonprofit organizations to help them be viable and grow.

YOUR PHILANTHROPIC PARTNER

In a real sense, we have been in partnership with Greater Clevelanders since our establishment as the world's first community foundation in 1914.

Initially, the foundation was endowed by the wealthiest members of our community. Today, people of all income levels join with us to help fulfill their philanthropic goals. We are careful stewards of the funds entrusted to us. We never forget that we exist because of the incredible generosity of this community, and the desire of its citizens to help one another.

In 2007, our endowment was worth more than $2.2 billion. We received more than $59 million in new gifts. We awarded almost 3,000 grants – for a total of nearly $85 million – to nonprofit organizations and projects throughout the region.

David Goldberg
Chairman, Board of Directors

Our highly professional investment staff and outside advisors have consistently beaten our benchmark for investment performance, such as the Standard & Poor's (S&P) index, by a wide margin. In 2007, despite increasingly uncertain economic conditions, our investments yielded an 8.4 percent return, compared with 5.5 percent for the S&P.

PROGRESS ON VITAL ISSUES

Over the years, we have recognized that we can have great value as a more active partner, one that proactively seeks out other organizations also working to effect change in the areas we consider our community's greatest needs. We define these vital needs as economic development, education, neighborhood revitalization, human services, and the arts. We can offer assistance to organizations, and we can focus the efforts of varied organizations on common goals. We know how to lend, and we know how to support others' initiatives; we are equally comfortable in either role.

We are excited about the progress our partnerships are making to address serious challenges in Greater Cleveland. We invite you to read more about them on the following pages of this report.

LASTING COMMITMENT

As we look to the years ahead, we can promise an ongoing commitment to being the community's "think tank and do tank" and its "go-to partner." We believe we can continue to make a significant contribution to Greater Cleveland's progress by bringing organizations together and supporting efforts to stimulate new thinking and spur positive action.

In the coming year, you will see us place more emphasis on programs for our community's youth. We will be launching our new communitywide Youth Development Initiative to give children ages 6 to 18 and their families access to a wide range of enrichment services and wholesome activities.

You will see us lead a more aggressive push for Cleveland's globalization across all areas of the foundation's work, from business attraction, to educational standards, to arts and cultural exchanges.

We also will concentrate on efforts that foster economic inclusion and wealth creation in our neighborhoods. For example, we are collaborating with Greater University Circle leaders to create jobs and build wealth in the neighborhoods. We envision a robust network of environmentally sustainable businesses employing local residents who own an equity stake in the enterprise. The first business, the Evergreen Cooperative Laundry, will launch in early 2009 and will provide high-quality, industrial-scale laundry services to University Circle health care institutions.

Similarly, we will seek creative ways to fortify our work force. Youth and adults alike will be served by quality training and programming at the new Cleveland Center for Arts and Technology. The center, supported by the foundation and Manchester Bidwell Corporation, will offer adult training in medical and office technologies that support local high-growth industries. It also will expose youth to arts programming in areas such as photography and digital arts. The Cleveland Clinic, University Hospitals, and the Cleveland Metropolitan School District have expressed interest in partnering with the center.

OUR APPRECIATION

Our heartfelt thanks go to our staff. They continually amaze us with their insight and understanding of this community and their ability to develop creative and smart solutions.

We also extend our gratitude to our board of directors. Our directors provide us with intellectual debate, enthusiastic support, and ultimately wise counsel, as they play an active role in furthering our programs. Special appreciation goes to Jackie Woods, our previous chairperson, and to Benson Lee, who both retired after 10 years of valued service to the foundation.

In addition, we wish to thank our elected officials and partner organizations throughout this community. They are as dedicated to Greater Cleveland's progress as we are, and we are privileged to work with them. Together, we can and will work wonders.

Sincerely,

Ronald B. Richard

A TRIBUTE

Jacqueline F. Woods retired from the Cleveland Foundation board of directors in March 2008 after serving 10 years as a member and the past two as its chairperson.

"Jackie brought a high level of energy to the Cleveland Foundation," said President and CEO Ronald Richard. "Under her leadership, we broke new ground in high-impact areas such as international relations and advanced energy." He described her leadership as bold, focused, and wise.

A nationally respected business leader, Woods is the retired president of SBC/Ameritech in Ohio (now AIRBT). She is a senior consultant for Cleveland's Landau Public Relations and serves as a director of several corporations and area cultural organizations. Richard added, "Her knowledge of state government and her relationships with the business community enabled us to forge effective partnerships to get things done. We are a more impactful organization because of Jackie's guidance."

REALIZING THE VISION

BY RONALD B. RICHARD
PRESIDENT AND CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Imagine a truly global Cleveland:

- Our children speak two or three languages—such as Chinese, Arabic, Spanish—and spend a year abroad as part of their schooling.
- A significant number of foreign companies—from Europe, Africa, Asia, and Central and South America—are headquartered or have operations here.
- Cultural and arts organizations are abuzz with international exhibits and artist and artisan exchanges.
- International visitors welcome the opportunity to come here to experience our many top-notch attractions, benefit from our world-class health care, and learn at our exceptional educational institutions.
- Our downtown is a thriving multicultural center, and our neighborhoods are vibrant places that derive strength from diversity.

Is this vision within our reach? Absolutely.

Do we have a long way to go? Yes, we do.

How can we get there? The only way to realize the vision of Cleveland as a global center is through a comprehensive, communitywide approach. We need the buy-in and participation of all key community sectors. Above all, we need rigorous follow-through and execution.

We all have something to gain. And we can win big if we make this leap effectively. We can succeed if we define and reverse what is keeping us from being a strong and global city: achieving the educational excellence necessary to develop and retain a knowledgeable and skilled work force, providing the appropriate supports for our young and old citizens to break out of the cycle of poverty and despair, and creating new jobs that will boost our economy for the long term.

A ROADMAP TO OUR GLOBAL CITY

Some of the important components that must serve as the foundation for a comprehensive approach are already beginning to take shape:

Build awareness. People must understand that becoming a global player is crucial to our future. It takes time to build awareness, but awareness is building rapidly indeed. Community leaders are beginning to acknowledge the issue and resolve to embrace what it will take for Cleveland to change.

As a case in point, the foundation has worked hard to increase awareness of the need to nurture an advanced energy industry in Cleveland. Now, many others believe in its value and are throwing their considerable weight behind this goal. Similarly, leaders now understand the necessity of preparing our children to compete in the global economy, and we are working with the business community to help our public school system put in place science, technology, engineering, and mathematics schools that will do just that.

We also are striving to enhance awareness of Cleveland around the world. We are bringing our city to the attention of business and government leaders across the globe, with the goal of forming mutually beneficial alliances.

Forge partnerships. The primary vehicle for progress will be partnerships at all levels of our community. A challenge of this magnitude requires the expanded participation of all community sectors working together. And we are making headway. From our perspective, we've seen an upswing in the number of effective partnerships taking place to bring about change.

I have the privilege of meeting with all segments of the community, from our state's highest-level elected officials, to our top corporate leaders, to our neighborhood activists and even youth gang leaders. The foundation collaborates with each of them on a wide range of efforts. Their programs and approaches may be very different, but they all are aiming for the same thing—improving the lives of Greater Clevelanders. The spirit is here—we just need to channel it in the right direction.

Focus on public policy. We must not overlook the public policy piece of the puzzle. We can chip away with programs here and there, but unless the foundation to support positive change is solid, we won't be able to sustain the progress. Our advanced energy efforts offer another telling example. We worked closely with state legislators on Ohio's new energy bill, which promotes the use of renewable energy sources; without it, we could not reach our goal of encouraging solar and wind energy manufacturers to locate R&D, manufacturing, and sales centers here.

Reach out. It is critical that we reach out beyond our own borders. I firmly believe that we can't save Cleveland within Cleveland. We can't just hope that things will move in the right direction and that global businesses and highly educated foreign nationals will be drawn to us. We must go out into the world and make the case for Cleveland and Northeast Ohio. And when we spark their interest, we must be able to move quickly to put deals together and make these opportunities become realities.

For example, the foundation is actively engaged in international business attraction. And we have seen a great deal of enthusiasm from foreign companies and nations about the many advantages that Cleveland has to offer, including our freshwater port, our close proximity to more than half of the American population, and our world-famous cultural and medical institutions.

We also must look outward to learn from other cities that are leading innovation on major issues, such as environmental advancement and creation of green-collar jobs. We can learn valuable lessons and best practices from others that will put us further ahead toward realizing our vision.

TAKING THE FIRST STEPS

Certainly, we have a long way to go and a lot of work to do.

But we are more than up to the task. We have all the natural and human resources we need to succeed in a global economy. As the Chinese like to say,

"A thousand-mile journey begins with a first step." We have taken that first step, and we will not rest until we finish the journey to Greater Cleveland's complete transformation to a global green city on a blue lake.

At the Cleveland Foundation, we are committed to doing our part — to lead when necessary and to support where beneficial — to make global Cleveland a reality.

“We are all connected in Northeast Ohio. Case Western Reserve University’s success benefits the region, just as the region’s advancements help us. The foundation has been an invaluable partner on many exciting new developments at Case, in Greater University Circle, and beyond.”

PARTNER FOR POSITIVE CHANGE

IN GREATER CLEVELAND

The Cleveland Foundation has been active in Greater Cleveland for more than 90 years, seeking solutions to the community’s most important needs. We’ve awarded more than $1 billion over the years to various organizations, large and small, with the promise to better the lives of people in our community.

Today, however, we know that Cleveland’s greatest challenges call for more. More resources. More solutions. More involvement.

They require a concerted effort from the region’s key leaders – in government, nonprofit, corporate, and other arenas – working together to create the bold change necessary for Cleveland to thrive. After all, it is our collective responsibility to make our community stronger.

Greater Cleveland is home to many effective and creative organizations. The Cleveland Foundation is privileged to be able to draw them together and set significant change in motion.

Under the leadership of Robert Eckardt, our senior vice president for programs and evaluation, we have taken our partnerships with fellow organizations to new heights in the quest for positive change. From the governor’s mansion to the streets of inner-city Cleveland, they are standing with us. Here are highlights of the progress these partnerships are making in each of the areas critical to our future.

ENERGIZING OUR ECONOMY

The foundation has clearly been a catalyst for increasing awareness of the potential that an advanced energy industry presents for Greater Cleveland. On the heels of our early grantmaking and direct involvement, others now are actively taking up the mantle of advanced energy, bringing Greater Cleveland another

Introducing Uptown, the new arts, retail, and residential district to be developed on the campus of Case Western Reserve University on Euclid Avenue. The $150 million project will consist of more than 300 residential units, restaurants, cafés, and retail stores. The foundation gave $1 million to set the project in motion, and another $1 million to help build a new home for the Museum of Contemporary Art, anchoring the district.

“When it comes to building an advanced energy industry in Ohio, the Cleveland Foundation has been a true catalyst.”

TED STRICKLAND
GOVERNOR OF OHIO

step closer to becoming a major player in this burgeoning industry. Most notably, we are actively working to make Cleveland a hub for wind manufacturing, which is a large near-term opportunity.

A grant to WIRE-Net, a manufacturing advocacy group on Cleveland's West Side, is allowing its Great Lakes Wind Network to educate our region's manufacturing community about the growth potential in serving the wind industry. The wind network is a trade group of companies that manufacture wind turbine components. A number of companies have responded by making investments and hiring additional workers. The foundation has worked closely with Team NEO and the Ohio Department of Development to encourage wind manufacturers from Europe to establish factories in Ohio to serve the growing U.S. wind marketplace.

A longer-term vision is to link Cleveland's wind manufacturing activity with our region's biggest natural resource, Lake Erie. Several funding partners have joined us in sponsoring a public-private regional energy task force to investigate the potential for developing the Great Lakes Wind Energy Center, which would include an offshore wind farm and a research center. Case Western Reserve University (CWRU), Cuyahoga County, the City of Cleveland, the Cleveland-Cuyahoga County Port Authority, and the Fund for Our Economic Future have all played a significant role in this important initiative.

We are also supporting academic work in this field. With a $3.6 million foundation grant, CWRU launched the Great Lakes Institute of Energy Innovation in its School of Engineering. Through the institute, CWRU is aiming to refocus some of its considerable engineering strength on advanced energy research.

Additionally, we have supported Greater Ohio Environmental Ohio, and the Ohio Environmental Council in our effort to build a network of effective partners to press for better advanced energy policies that will facilitate the growth of this industry. Our BP Fellow for Energy and Environmental Advancement Richard Stuebel actively supported the adoption of an advanced portfolio standard, which called for a portion of our state's electricity supply to come from renewable energy sources such as wind or solar power.

Thanks in part to these partners, Ohio Gov. Ted Strickland and key Ohio House leaders were able to pass a new energy bill in early May that requires 25 percent of the state's electricity supply in 2025 to come from advanced energy sources. The bill represents another major step forward for Ohio by creating a substantial market for advanced energy technologies and businesses.

GOING GLOBAL IN CLEVELAND

By preparing our region to be a leader in advanced energy and high-tech industries, we give ourselves another way to help Greater Cleveland compete in global markets. 2007 marked our first year with our Director of International Relations Jorge Delgado, and with his expertise we already have made significant strides to develop international connections and partnerships that will help our region grow.

In 2007, the Great Lakes Science Center built on its commitment to advanced energy with the help of the foundation and installed a 300-foot array of solar panels at its entrance. It generates enough power to light more than 65,000 square feet of exhibition space, or the equivalent of four Ohio homes.

Nationally, the Ford Foundation and the Arts Education Partnership, a bipartisan think tank, have included Cleveland in their efforts on this issue. Now in its second year, our SmART in the City program, supported by the international financial corporation UBS Wealth Management, gives students a chance to explore their creativity while using the arts to sharpen their academic skills. Hundreds of fifth- and sixth-grade students from Cleveland schools spend the summer learning to dance, act, paint, write plays, play an instrument, and more, with guidance from more than 50 experienced teaching artists. Eight neighborhood schools, churches, and community centers serve as venues for SmART in the City.

Over the past year, we've shaped an exciting global culture initiative called Creative Fusion, a program that will work with Cleveland area nonprofits to bring accomplished world artists to Cleveland for extended residencies. Through this initiative, we can further support Cleveland's emergence as a global city.

Keeping with our international efforts, Kathleen Cervery, program director for arts and culture, is part of a contingent of Clevelanders participating in an exchange program with Turkey, sponsored by the U.S. State Department. The program is training Turkish artists and educators in the techniques used by U.S. arts organizations to work with at-risk youth. Representatives from Young Audiences, Cleveland Public Theatre, and the Cleveland Metropolitan School District are also part of this important program.

Through these initiatives, the Cleveland Foundation and its partners are ensuring that the arts continue to play a leading role in Cleveland's future.

For instance, IBC Solar, a top German manufacturer of solar energy components, selected Cleveland as the site of its U.S. headquarters. The decision followed visits with foundation staff, Cleveland Mayor Frank Jackson, and high-level representatives from the offices of Ohio Lt. Gov. Lee Fisher, Sen. Sherrod Brown, and Sen. George Voinovich. In addition, a dozen Costa Rican companies have agreed to distribute their U.S. exports to the Midwest through Cleveland under a new trade arrangement brokered through foundation staff, Cleveland city officials, and the Cleveland-Cuyahoga County Port Authority. Costa Rican officials will also open Midwest trade headquarters here.

The Cleveland Foundation will continue its efforts to spark international interest in Cleveland as a favorable location and to assist area companies and organizations in developing international ties that help bolster our economy.

ADVANCING THE ARTS

Because we believe the arts are a critical component of a vibrant and healthy community, we are working to strengthen existing arts organizations and expand the reach of the arts to the entire community. The foundation has collaborated with both local and state arts organizations to keep the arts front and center in Ohio.

Studies continually show that students involved with the arts perform better in other academic areas, which is why we work to integrate an arts curriculum more fully in public education. Locally, we have joined with the George Gund Foundation to fund and advise an arts education plan for the Cleveland schools.

The Detroit-Shoreway Community Development Center has joined with two other arts organizations to create a booming arts district on Cleveland's West Side. The Gordon Square Arts district will house the Cleveland Public Theatre, Near West Theatre, and the soon-to-be-renovated Capitol Theatre. Supporters estimate the new district will infuse more than $300 million in the surrounding community.

“Strong partnerships are the way to prosperity in Greater Cleveland. In the important areas of economic growth, education, arts and culture, and quality of life, the foundation is this community’s go-to partner.”

REVITALIZING OUR NEIGHBORHOODS

In the face of a transitioning economy, Cleveland's neighborhoods are struggling to compete for residents, businesses, and investments. Recognizing this challenge, the Cleveland Foundation has developed many strong partnerships that are critical to making Cleveland a premier place to live, work, play, and visit.

One of our most prominent neighborhoods, University Circle, carries the distinction of having one of the largest concentrations of arts, education, and health care institutions in the country. More than $2 billion in projects have been built or started since 2000. To stimulate reinvestment in this area and beyond, the foundation has led a coalition of some two dozen philanthropic, public, and private partners in an ambitious strategy in "Greater University Circle," extending the area to include portions of Cleveland's Fairfax, Glenville, Hough, Little Italy, and Buckeye-Shaker neighborhoods, as well as portions of East Cleveland.

For the past three years, India Pierce Lee, program director for neighborhoods and housing, and Lillian Kurl, director of special projects, have worked together to promote the benefits of the partnership. Our Greater University Circle initiative has been able to deliver unprecedented results.

A telling example is the agreement among multiple partners to invest $4 million in a joint employer-assisted housing program launched in May 2008. The partners include Case Western Reserve University (CWRU), Cleveland Clinic, University Hospitals, Judson at University Circle, the Kent Smith Charitable Trust, the Surdna Foundation, the Cleveland Museum of Art, University Circle Inc., and the Cleveland Foundation. This program, administered through Fairfax Renaissance Development Corp., provides forgivable home loans to employees of participating Greater University Circle institutions and area nonprofits who buy, renovate, or rent homes in the area.

Another example of the power of partnerships is the combined commitment of $26 million to begin construction of three major infrastructure projects considered essential to smoothing out the area's notorious traffic problems. These involve reconstructing the traffic circle at East 105th Street and Martin Luther King Jr. Drive, building a new transit station at East 120th Street and Mayfield Road, and reconstructing the transit station at Cedar Hill. Our partners in this effort are University Hospitals, Cleveland Clinic, CWRU, Regional Transit Authority, City of Cleveland, Cuyahoga County Engineer, and Holden Parks Trust. Construction is set to begin in 2009.

We also are involved in another major revitalization effort, carried out in collaboration with the George Gund Foundation and Neighborhood Progress Inc., to help in the recovery of six Cleveland neighborhoods by investing $4.2 million in community development corporations. It has become a national model for neighborhood improvement. Funds are earmarked for development in neighborhoods with residential and economic growth potential.

"No one knows better than I do how immensely helpful the Cleveland Foundation has been in our recent efforts to become a global city."

FRANK JACKSON
MAYOR OF CLEVELAND

Globalization is an emerging area of focus for the foundation, as well as for the city. Over the past year, foundation staff members have worked with city officials and the Cleveland-Cuyahoga County Port Authority to promote Cleveland to international businesses. Here, Mayor Frank Jackson visits with Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez at the president's home in the capital city of San José.

IMPROVING EDUCATION

Enhancing education—in both attainment levels and quality—is critical for citizens of our community to be successful in all aspects of their lives. We are pursuing a two-pronged focus: excellent schools that prepare our students to compete in the 21st century, and state policy that provides every student with access to a quality education. We have been working hard to secure both for the next generations of students.

The Cleveland and George Gund Foundations adopted a joint strategy in June 2006 to support the scaled-up development of new high-quality, innovative schools in partnership with the Cleveland Metropolitan School District and the Cleveland Teachers' Union. To date, six new schools have opened, including the Ginn Academy, a high school for at-risk boys; the Cleveland School of Science and Medicine on the John Hay campus; and four prekindergarten through eighth grade single-gender academies (two for girls and two for boys). Two new science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) high schools are opening this fall.

To ensure these schools are successful, we helped fund the Office of New and Innovative Schools within the district to develop and manage the new schools. In addition, the new teachers' union contract provides these schools with hiring autonomy and separately negotiated work rules tailored to meet the needs of each school. Helen Williams, program director for education, has provided extensive advisory support to the district as it begins the next phase of its turnaround.

In addition to championing new schools, we also applaud excellent existing schools. In April, the foundation, in partnership with the Gund Foundation and New York-based Institute for Student Achievement, released a study highlighting 13 Cleveland schools—public, private, parochial, and charter—where students are excelling in some of the city's poorest neighborhoods. The report contains lessons for all schools and can be found on our website.

We know that educational attainment is a key factor affecting poverty levels. According to U.S. Census Bureau data, the earnings gap between the more and less educated has been growing wider since 1960. Creating an educational system in which students can thrive academically is perhaps the most important necessity for the long-term economic and social health of our region.

HELPING PEOPLE IN NEED

Children, youth, families, and individuals who are at risk, in crisis, or in need of new skills and opportunities require a range of services to help them meet their challenges. Partnerships have been a cornerstone in providing this assistance.

Consider our Youth Development Initiative (YDI). We are mobilizing more than 150 leaders from

The foundation was an early supporter of the Cleveland Metropolitan School District's plan to create "schools of choice." As part of the initiative, John Hay High School has been transformed into a three-school campus, and it recently received the highest rating of "excellent" on Ohio's report card. The Cleveland School of Science and Medicine, Cleveland School of Architecture and Design, and Cleveland Early College High School are all housed in this beautifully restored building in University Circle.

“The mission of Peace in the Hood is to persuade kids not to join gangs and to teach them to solve their problems without resorting to violence. The Cleveland Foundation cares deeply about our kids and their futures and has been a wonderful partner in this important, life-saving work.”

KHALID SAMAD
COMMUNITY ACTIVIST

Our Project Access program provides business training to small community and faith organizations that serve our inner-city neighborhoods. Workshops include sessions on board management, proposal writing, and budget development. Project Access has assisted more than 80 organizations in the last two years, with the majority of participants reporting significant improvement in how their nonprofits function and thrive.

A community is only as strong as its citizens, and the foundation remains dedicated to creating and supporting programs that lift up Greater Clevelanders.

BUILDING A BRIGHTER FUTURE WITH PARTNERS

At the Cleveland Foundation, we are convinced that these and other partnerships are making a valuable, positive impact, and they are the key to improving our community's future. They are helping build stronger connections between the many public, private, and nonprofit organizations that call Greater Cleveland home. These partnerships generate the added benefits of bolstering our shared confidence, strengthening our resolve, and creating bigger and brighter ideas to keep Greater Cleveland moving forward.

Much has been accomplished, much more remains to be done. Together.

organizations throughout the community that serve children ages 6 to 18. The initiative will coordinate all youth services, including school transitions, out-of-school activities and summer job programs. Lisa Bottoms, program director for human services and child and youth development, has been assuring that the initiative gets off to a strong start. Behind the scenes, she and others are working to fix the disconnects, so that youth get access to the services they need to become good citizens.

YDI is a continuation of Cleveland's successful early childhood initiative, Invest in Children. For young children from birth to age 5, this program coordinates multiple public agencies, community nonprofits, and funders to act as a support system for our youngest citizens. Since it began in 1999, more than 75 percent of children born in Cuyahoga County have benefited from at least one of its services, which include home visits from registered nurses and lead poisoning prevention.

Prisoner re-entry is another emerging area of focus for the foundation, as more than 7000 men and women return home each year to our community. Partnering with the State of Ohio, the George Gund Foundation, Cuyahoga County, the City of Cleveland, and community and faith groups, we are in favor of a comprehensive system to provide former prisoners with the tools and support they need to become involved, productive citizens. In this way, we are helping a population that has long been ignored.

The Eleanor B. Rainey Memorial Institute provides art-based activities for low-income children in the Hough neighborhood. The after-school program offers homework help, food, and activities for 30 students. On Saturdays, the center is swarming with more than 200 children taking lessons in everything from drama to Capoeira, a rhythmic martial arts form. The arts curriculum is integrated with math and English to give students a chance to reinforce those skills.

GIVING THROUGH THE CLEVELAND FOUNDATION

Our commitment to enhancing the lives of all residents of Greater Cleveland begins with our donors. Together, we share the common desire to make our community a better place. From the foundation's beginning, donors have played a critical role in local philanthropy. In the early days, gifts through wills and trusts provided the foundation with much-needed endowment funds. Many of those same funds make it possible for the foundation to address the vital issues described in this report to the community.

Today, individuals, families, corporations, and nonprofit organizations use a variety of charitable gifting and fund options to partner with the foundation. Last year, we received contributions of more than $59 million from donors who care deeply about this region. We are privileged to serve as their—and your—philanthropic partner.

We are equally pleased that donor-advised funds recommended grants of more than $9.5 million to address a variety of community issues, ranging from improving literacy to encouraging environmental sustainability to preventing youth violence. Our supporting organization partners also authorized grants of more than $1.5 million to nonprofit organizations

We know that our partnerships make a difference in the quality of life for Greater Clevelanders.

Cyprice H. Bragg

CAPRICE H. BRAGG
Vice President for Gift Planning and Donor Relations

After a three-year renovation, the Cleveland Museum of Art reopened to the public this year. The opening marked the completion of the first phase of a $350 million expansion and renovation aimed at transforming the museum. The foundation has been an avid supporter of the museum throughout the years.

“We offer the foundation our continuous support because of its unselfish commitment to the Greater Cleveland community and its stellar history of performance.”

Safety concerns were at issue when a developer proposed building a five-story hotel on land adjacent to Camp Cheerful in Strongsville, which annually serves more than 1,700 children and adults, many with special needs. A grant from the Cleveland Foundation helped to purchase the land for Camp Cheerful and maintain a safe haven for campers.

LEGACY SOCIETY

Members of the Legacy Society have planned a future gift to their community through a bequest, trust, pooled income fund, life insurance policy, charitable gift annuity, or charitable remainder trust.

Brittany Vernon is a very busy teenager at the Cleveland School of Science and Medicine. She is student council president and takes classes at Cuyahoga Community College three days a week. She graduated from the Cleveland Clinic-sponsored Charles R. Drew Academy, a 10-week program designed to interest minorities in the health care profession. She has her sights set on becoming a psychiatrist. To increase the number of success stories like Brittany's, the Cleveland Foundation is partnering with the Cleveland Metropolitan School District to create more educational opportunities in Cleveland.

The Ingenuity Festival is Cleveland's weekend-long celebration of art and technology. Occupying a sprawling campus downtown at Playhouse Square Center, the festival features Northeast Ohio artists presenting their works alongside international artists, high-technology firms, and colleges and universities.

FINANCIAL SUMMARY

The fiscal year 2007 might be described as the year that uncertainty returned to the markets. The turmoil in the credit markets began in the third quarter of 2007, accompanied by the freefall in the housing market. Once useful financial instruments and tactics began to cause significant distress for investors as valuations became uncertain and securities unwanted.

As uncertainty and volatility continued, the financial markets reacted negatively in the fourth quarter and through the first quarter of 2008. While the return in the fourth quarter was negative, the S&P 500 still generated a 5.5 percent return for the year. Despite problems in the credit market, the Lehman Aggregate, a benchmark for fixed income, generated a 6.96 percent return. The total composite return for the foundation for 2007 was 8.36 percent. Allocations to international equities and alternative investments, along with correct decisions on sector weightings and stock selection, contributed favorably to the performance of the foundation compared with the broad markets.

The foundation generated $174 million in total revenue, gains, and other support in 2007. During this period, our total expenses were $97 million. Thus, our revenue exceeded our expenses by $77 million.

The administrative expenses of the foundation were $11.1 million and represented 11.5 percent of total expenses for the year.

INVESTMENT OPTIONS

Choosing the investment option for philanthropic funds for growth is just as important as the decision to entrust the Cleveland Foundation with investing and distributing those funds. The foundation provides donors with a variety of investment options and strategies for the funds they establish, allowing them to select the one that will meet their philanthropic objectives.
